(Special to The Tribune.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 14 — After

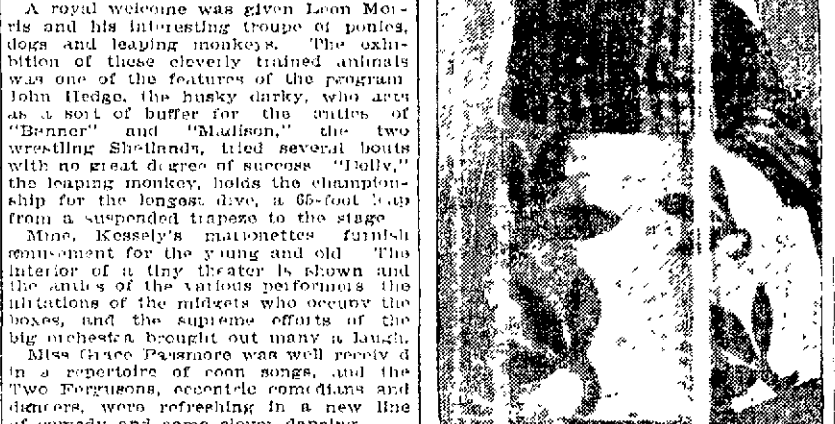

The chain of evidence against the two men runs as far East as Denver, where the funds were stolen, and reveals a beautiful little scheme of disposing of the loot by mail.

Mattie Lee Jones, a cutter employed in a Market-street tailor shop, was first suspected by the detectives, and an investigation led to the finding of a quantity of drugs stored out in Mission street, which she purchased at a bargain price from a man who had been buying a buver of bankrupt drug stores, and was therefore able to sell cheaper than the market prices. While endeavoring to discover where he received his goods, she learned that he was one John W. Seasmith, in a lodging-house in Oakland, whence he had fled from Denver, Colo., after his thefts had been discovered.

Sexuality was employed by the Schultz case, however, and was in the habit of taking home articles, of value in his pockets and then shipping them to Wells-Park in small parcels to Jones, who was in Denver, but Jones will be incarcerated here, but Jones will be changed here.

District Attorney Langdon and Donahue Object to Postponement of Case Because of Coghlan's Absence.

The trial of Peter Claudanes was continued until Wednesday morning in order to allow Attorney A. L. Pritch time to prepare his defense. Pritch spent an hour this morning in conference with Attorney J. W. Scott and Pegee and John Claudanes, and the case requested a two-day continuance of Judge Wago.

John Claudanes is a native of the United States, a member of the Greek boys, who lives at Grexville, and who is financing the defense of his brother Peter. He is here tonight and tomorrow will be present with Pritch in consultation with the defense. He fears that Peter are desirous of enlisting the services of Pritch, and said he would accept of the offer.

The first incident of the day was the presentation of an affidavit by A. J. Coghlan of San Francisco, who is interested in the case, to the court. Judge Imber tried to explain the purport of the affidavit, but not being an attorney, he was unable to do so. He said that Coghlan was busy with a murder case in San Francisco and could not at-

'YELLOW PERIL' GHOST NOW LOCKED IN SKELETON CLOSET

Japanese to Stop Immigration to U. S.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—A special to the Record-Herald from Washington says: All Japanese immigration to the United States is to be stopped by the Japanese government. When the Japanese diet meets a few weeks hence Baron Komura, Minister of Foreign Affairs, will make official announcement that the government has decided to prohibit all immigration to the United States after a given date. Thus will disappear the last remaining difference of possible cause of trouble between the United States and Japan.

DIPLOMATIC VICTORY.
Though the announcement in Tokyo may be made upon the assumption that the Japanese government has voluntarily agreed upon that course, as a matter of fact, the decision was reached through a long series of negotiations between Secretary Root and Baron Takahira, the Japanese Ambassador to the United States. The order of the Japanese government will prohibit all emigration, but will, of course, leave travel free so that merchants, students, and tourists from Japan may visit America at will under the passport agreement with the United States Government.

FULLY DISCUSSED.
When the "understanding" between the United States and Japan as to the Pacific ocean and Chinese empire was made up a week or so ago, and the notes which had been exchanged were given effectually to the world, comment was made that if our Government had settled these questions and left the immigration issue unsettled, no very great progress toward a permanent peace would have been actually made.

It is a fact that the highest officials of the two governments have viewed the future with apprehension if the immigration question were left undisposed of. With neither government desiring war and each doing all in its power to avoid it, both might nevertheless be forced into war.

FEARED RACE RIOTS.
The danger was that there might be an anti-Japanese riot in San Francisco or elsewhere on the Pacific Coast. This would stir up popular passion both in the United States and Japan. In this country it might eventually be followed by public opinion demanding and securing the enactment by Congress of a Japanese exclusion bill. This in turn would inflame public opinion in Japan. For a long time it has been believed by the best informed officials and diplomats that the enactment of an exclusion law by the United States would be inevitably followed by war with Japan.

In settling the immigration matter, it is understood there is no treaty, nor even an exchange of formal notes, but that none the less, the so-called "yellow peril" is a ghost laid to rest.

GRANT TOLD OFFICERS OF FURNITURE'S VALUE

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 14.—It was learned from United States customs officers yesterday that Joseph D. Grant of Murphy, Grant & Co., the millinery clubman, had called their attention to the underservicing of a lot of handsome furniture which he had imported to this country from Europe. The shipment of the furniture had been left to the men of whom Grant had purchased it. No information concerning the value of the furniture or of the amount of the discrepancies in the invoices is obtainable. It has been circulated that Grant made an effort to outwit the government by misrepresenting the value of the furniture and that a special agent frustrated the attempt. This is specifically and emphatically denied by the customs officers, who assert that they had no information of the underservicing of the property until their attention was called to it by Grant in person.

JUDGE GARBER, NOTED JURIST, PASSES AWAY

THE LATE JUDGE JOHN GARBER.

Death Summons Man Who Stood for Decades at the Head of the California Bar.

After an illness of about six weeks, Judge John Garber, the distinguished lawyer and jurist, died at his home, 2706 Claremont avenue, shortly after 11 o'clock last night.

Death came after a sudden relapse during the evening. At the bedside were the members of the family, who had been in readiness for the final summons for several days. The noted patient, in his advanced age, was unable to withstand the long siege of typhoid fever and succumbed. By his death California lost one of her most eminent citizens.

Judge Garber was born at Staunton, Virginia, 75 years ago. He was a graduate of the University of Virginia in mathematics, Latin, chemistry, natural history, French and German. He commenced his business life as a civil engineer, and as such was employed by the Virginia Central Railroad. This he followed about two years, and then studied law, and was admitted to practice in the State of Virginia. From the State of Virginia he went to San Francisco and went into the office of his uncle, Joseph G. Baldwin, who was afterwards one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of California. Judge Garber went to Santa Cruz and practiced law there about one and one-half years.

MARRIED MISS WHITE.
From Santa Cruz he went to Nevada City. He married Miss Juliet White, daughter of Judge John White of Alabama. After his marriage he went to Austin, Texas, where he formed a partnership with Colonel Harry I. Thornton. The two went to Hamilton, Nevada, in the White Pine mining excitement, and practiced law there. While living in Hamilton he was elected Justice of the Supreme Court of Nevada. The other members of the Supreme Court of Nevada at this time were B. C. Whitely, J. T. Lewis, and J. W. Lewis. On November 7, 1872, Judge Garber resigned his position on the Supreme Court of Nevada and went to Placerville, Nevada, to take part in the great mining excitement. He remained at Placerville until the Nevada Mining Company v. the Nevada Mining Company was decided. He then went to San Francisco.

After the trial of this suit Judge Garber and Colonel Thornton again entered into partnership and moved to San Francisco, the law firm then being Garber & Thornton. Thomas B. Bishop was afterwards taken into the firm, under the name of Garber, Thornton & Bishop. Colonel Thornton retired on account of ill-health, and Judge Garber took his place in the firm, under the name of Garber, Boat & Bishop. Judge Garber withdrew from the firm after the death of Judge Boat and formed a partnership with Judge Eugene Garber and his son, Joseph B. Garber. Upon the death of Eugene Garber, Henry T. Creswell became a member of the firm, the firm name being Garber, Creswell & Garber.

Judge Garber's career as a lawyer included participation in some of the West's most notable legal battles. He represented Mrs. Jane Sanford in the settlement of the $12,000,000 Stanford estate and was one of the leading counsel in the famous Fair will litigation.

A JURIST'S TRIBUTE.
Following is a tribute to Judge Garber that was written by Judge James D. Thornton, ex-justice of the Supreme Court of California:

"Judge Garber is able in all kinds of cases. I do not know about admiralty law, but am confident that if he turned his attention to it, he would excel in it. He is profoundly grounded in legal principles, learns all kinds of law with great facility and rapidly, and I have no doubt that he would take a high rank in the courts of Westminster if he appeared in them."

"As a speaker his is the eloquence of sound argument. His diction is vigorous, apt and appropriate. His manner in court is dignified, decorous and easy. He seems perfectly at home and is always courteous and respectful to court and counsel."

ALWAYS PREPARED.
"He excels in cross-examination of witnesses. I remember that L. Thornton told me that Judge Garber was the best cross-examiner he ever saw. He is always prepared in his cases. His rules and principles applicable to them seem to be as easy as the way to his office or the courts. Without disparagement to other able members of the San Francisco bar, I class Judge Garber among its leaders. If not at its leader, it has may well be styled able and learned. I say this after a knowledge of its members for a space of more than forty years."

"Judge Garber seems to have explored the fountains of law, as well as its streams and rivulets. Such is his knowledge of the law that to solve the intricacies of a case is to him no difficult matter."

"He has been a great general reader of literature, history, poetry and the leading works of fiction. His conversation is highly interesting and instructive. Few men are more entertaining in their talk."

"He is a man of high character and a worthy citizen."

WAS A DEMOCRAT.
"He is a Democrat in politics, of the gold wing of the party and is always ready to give good reasons for his political views. He is a great mining and corporation lawyer. As a mining lawyer he has no superior. In the department of law he has studied for stands in the first rank for attainments."

Judge Garber was a member of a distinguished family of jurists and men of national reputation, from whom lived at the same time in California. Judge Joseph G. Baldwin, the uncle of Judge Garber, was Justice of the Supreme Court of California; his son, Alexander Baldwin, United States district judge of the State of Nevada; John B. Fulton, who married a daughter of Judge Baldwin, a cousin of Judge Garber, and Judge Garber lived here at the same time.

HONORED BY PRESIDENT.
President Roosevelt, when appointing the first Panama Canal commission, honored the appointment of Judge Garber, which, for private reasons, Judge Garber was compelled to decline.

There survived the noted lawyer a widow, Mrs. Juliet White Garber; four children, Mrs. Whitney Patache, Miss Lida J. Garber, Mrs. Frank D. Stringham and Joseph B. Garber. He was a brother of Mrs. Rosetta Davis, Mrs. E. B. Garber and Miss Margaret Garber, and uncle of Mrs. Julia H. Chaney.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence on Claremont avenue.

MINISTER DEFENDS HERESY AND HERETICS

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Heresy in the Christian Church was held up as a cause for present day tendencies toward merely orthodox and "respectable" religion by Rev. Dr. Frank Crane of the Union Congregational Church of Worcester, Mass., in a sermon here yesterday.

Crane defended heresy and heretics and urged revolt from established religion as the best means of fostering the growth of a new religion, until hampered by traditional and accepted opinions.

WHO WILL TAKE MULLINS' PLACE?

Several Applicants for Seat in Council That He Will Soon Vacate.

Interest is being taken by the politicians in the question as to who will succeed John Mullins as Councilman from the Third ward when he takes his seat in the Board of Supervisors from the Fifth District on the first of the new year.

Mayor Mott has not definitely made up his mind whom he will appoint. Among those who are aspiring to the place is Charles Quayle, an attorney, David Boye, B. S. Parsons and A. R. Silverwater.

Among the interesting bits of political gossip is that John Mitchell, retiring chairman of the Board of Supervisors, whose place will be taken by Councilman Mullins, will be a candidate for the State Board of Equalization. While Mitchell has not announced his candidacy yet, he is seriously considering the matter.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 14.—Santiago Rodriguez, a mining engineer of the City of Mexico, who had been living at a hotel in Santa Monica for some weeks, has disappeared, and his secretary, Louis Garza, reported the matter yesterday to the authorities here.

A Great Leader of the Bar.

For thirty years John Garber was the acknowledged head of the bar of California, primus inter pares, a man who exemplified in his professional conduct the lofty ideals of an ancient and noble calling. He honored his profession by paying it honor, and by his adherence to the solid virtues and the enlightened principles underlying the law; no less was his loyalty to the traditions which held the advocate to the purpose of the law and forbade him to distort or defile its machinery.

It is worth remembering that Judge Garber earned the reverence and esteem of his colleagues and the judiciary by his dignity and high sense of honor as much as by his profound knowledge of jurisprudence and his ability to correlate and apply its principles. His eminent talents were never devoted to doubtful expedients nor was the lustre of his name tarnished by unworthy methods. His death in the ripeness of years of useful honor leaves his eulogists under no necessity to apologize for any act or device in his long career. His success at the bar demonstrates that the path of honor still leads to highest eminence and emolument in the legal profession.

During all the years of his practice in the courts of California and Nevada no one was ever heard to question his integrity; no one was ever hardy enough to accuse him of questionable expedients or sharp practice; no one ever disputed his version of an understanding; he was never charged with misquoting a statute or an authority or deceiving courts and attorneys. He was never known to engage in wrangles with other attorneys while trials were in progress; he never browbeat witnesses nor reflected on the motives of jurors. Always courteous to his adversaries at the bar and considerate of their feelings, his attitude toward the bench was that of gracious respect, inspiring in men of lesser moral and mental calibre by his manner and his own reverence for the law and its ministers a higher sense of the responsibilities and a loftier conception of the duties of a magistrate. No breath of scandal ever attached to his method of conducting a case, no imputation was ever heard of his attempting to exert improper influence with judges, juries or witnesses. No wonder judges listened to him with respectful attention, and that other attorneys accustomed to wrangle among themselves refrained from unseemly displays of temper and personal animosities in trying a case with or against him. His presence quelled disorder and ribaldry. His dignity and learning, the example of his courtesy and self-control, exerted an influence which elevated court proceedings and shamed men for the time being from practices they were wont to indulge in.

It is impossible to associate Judge Garber with conduct that has too often disgraced California courts of late years. Not the least of his claims to public respect is the mere fact that dignity accompanied him in every court room, and that no one ventured to treat him with disrespect while he was trying a case. There is a moral in this that deserves study while a discussion relative to a reform of our statutory code and the rules of court procedure is in progress. While there are imperfections in the law and room for improvement in the rules for applying it, there would be small complaint if lawyers generally held to the high course pursued by Judge Garber, and courts compelled the decorum he invariably observed. Judge Garber was himself keenly alive to the infirmities of the law, but he disdained to take advantage of them, and he had a noble scorn of men who utilized loop holes in the law as a means of thwarting its purpose. The uprightness of his character held him aloof from practice that was lucrative but fundamentally dishonest and demoralizing to the administration of justice.

But with Judge Garber was no stern moralist; he had nothing of the Puritan in his temperament; his mind was catholic, his sympathies large and intensely human, and his charity for the faults and foibles of mankind exceedingly broad. His high sense of honor was tolerant and kindly, hence his affability to younger and lesser lights at the bar, his charity for the mistakes of men less learned and able. This trait in his character earned him affection as well as esteem.

However, it was his tremendous grasp of the whole scheme of the law, his knowledge of its origin and development, and his fidelity to its vital principles, his reverence for its forms and functions, as well as his habitual dignity in the judicial presence, that entitled him to the confidence and respect that was accorded him by the bench. His learning and dignity, his honor and candor strengthened any cause he undertook to defend, and gave weight to the arguments he addressed to courts and juries. Judge Garber was a great lawyer in his moral worth as well as the amplitude of his powers and learning.

Real amelioration of the unhappy conditions in Ireland became a fact when Catholics and Protestants began to sink their religious differences and unite in a common effort to compel redress of the political and industrial abuses which kept the Irish people in a state of stagnant poverty, abuses which thrived on the prejudices and animosities engendered by creedal divisions and had their origin in race and dynastic conflicts which long ago lost their significance. The natives of India are beginning to follow the examples of the Irish. Hindus and Mohammedans are uniting in a common cause. They are ignoring spiritual differences in a concentrated effort to have their material and political affairs adjusted more in conformity with their needs and the principles of justice. From the mouth of the Ganges to the plateaus of the Himalayas the country is seething with an agitation for redress of grievances which have existed since the days of Warren Hastings. The British authorities are making strenuous efforts to suppress this agitation, but the agitation thrives on attempts to suppress it, and it is now evident in London as well as in Bombay and Calcutta that substantial reforms that will alleviate the horrible destitution of the land and give the Indians a larger share in the management of their domestic affairs must be granted if British rule is to be maintained in Hindoostan. The strength of a united people is making itself felt, and the policy of governing India for the benefit of England and Englishmen must be sooner or later discontinued.

How simple the story is, how trite, and how common in the annals of crime! A trusted young man becomes infatuated with another woman than his wife, forms an illicit connection and gets to spending more money than he can afford. He gambles in the hope of making both ends meet, loses and steals from his employers to continue his gambling operations. The whole story of the descent into crime and disgrace is clearly traceable to the fall from domestic virtue. How old is the tale, yet how continually it repeats itself! But how pitiful and sad it all is!

Ex-Governor Gage on Senator White

Former Governor Gage has provoked an angry dispute by his remarks at the unveiling of the monument erected in Los Angeles to the late Stephen M. White. His statements in regard to Senator White's views with respect to certain matters are vigorously disputed by persons who were far less intimate with him than the ex-Governor, and who view the deceased statesman through a halo of admiration which magnifies his virtues and minimizes his defects.

"Accordingly, those of us who enjoyed his confidence and understood his heart-felt ideas of government," said Governor Gage, "knew that he could not believe and did not believe in the initiative, referendum, recall, or imperative mandate. He did not believe in that other un-American and vicious arrangement, Civil Service—borrowed from the Monarchies and despotisms of the Old World. Whenever a Republic borrows political ideas from monarchies or from despots the people of that Republic usually get spurious loans. At any rate the Senator did not believe in Civil Service, nor in anything else which might or could create a favored class of office holders with life tenures."

Gage said that Senator White had read much of and well knew and feared the dangers of ancient "municipal leagueism"; and he did not believe in modern "municipal leagueism, which throughout America, as in ancient times, exhibits a grasping desire for excessive local power—all of these political schemes he believed tended towards State disintegration; tended towards disunion, and, if persisted in, and generally adopted, would destroy our free political institutions."

Possibly the ex-Governor has ascribed some of his own ideas to Senator White, and doubtless has given others the color of his own sentiments; nevertheless, in some particulars he is unquestionably right as to Senator White's beliefs. It is certain that Stephen M. White believed in a constitutional government of checks and balances and not a pure democracy, which he regarded as unsafe, as being too volatile and changeable in sentiment and purpose to preserve a stable government and permanent institution. He was intensely democratic in sympathies and aims, but was imbued with something of Edmund Burke's reluctance to trust democracy fully. He stood in fear of the excesses of the multitude, of its ignorance, prejudices and its susceptibility to sudden and violent change, its violent and passionate resentments, its liability to rush to extremes, and its disregard of the wholesome restraints which he deemed necessary to preserve social order and hold events and policies within a steady, defined course. Still it was his desire that democracy should have the largest play and freedom of action within the limitations of the organic law, which he regarded as a chart and compass as well as a definition of powers and boundaries. In other words, Senator White was a faithful disciple of Thomas Jefferson, being as jealous and fearful of executive power as he was of the unrestrained rule of the mob.

It is easy to discern that his expressions in regard to what he deemed popular excess on the one hand and executive usurpation on the other could be construed by partisans of either side as chiming with their peculiar beliefs in general. A believer in opportunism in matters of policy, he was a firm adherent of the theory of the broadest freedom of action within constitutional limitations, and therefore favored the election of Senators by popular vote.

It must be admitted, however, that ex-Governor Gage had exceptional opportunities for becoming acquainted with Senator White's views. For many years Gage and White were law partners, and they were close personal friends for a generation. They differed widely in politics, but they nevertheless agreed upon many subjects. It is known that Senator White was disappointed with the workings of the civil service law, being disgusted at the manner in which it was often manipulated by those who professed to regard it with reverence, and the encouragement it gave to cant and hypocrisy. He was a robust partisan in politics, an individualist, and he detested the class of spineless place-holders who sprang up under the civil service system. He scorned men who emulated themselves of political conviction in their desire to draw a salary from the government, and who shirked the responsibilities of citizenship in a free electorate on the plea that their employment by the government deprived them of the right of free speech and ballot.

It is to be presumed that Senator White did not regard the initiative, referendum and recall with favor. His public utterances do not show that he was opposed to those devices, neither do they show that he favored them. It is possible that he was inclined favorably toward them at one time and was antipathetic at another—public men are prone to change their opinions, which is not at all to their discredit. But Senator White's habit of thought and the general trend of his ideas forbid the idea that he was committed to the wisdom of the initiative and referendum. However, it is quite certain that he had no love for the kind of government ex-Governor Gage presents him as favoring. That is pure Hamiltonianism, and against that White was irrevocably opposed.

MACADAM STREETS IN CITIES

Many years ago Oakland had the macadam fever as badly as Sacramento now has. The streets were macadamized by the mile. As long as the material was new and bright everything was well, but in a short time it was discovered that macadam for much used streets was a failure. Wear pulverized the rock and then came the winds and blew it away, leaving a surface from which points of rock protruded. These in turn were ground down and the streets were in a dismal condition. Recent experiments in Sacramento show similar results. Macadam is not fit for city streets. The street problem is a very serious matter with all cities. Macadam is costly and inefficient at the same time. We are piling up a big bill to be met in the future. The time has come to order a halt. It has been demonstrated that macadam will not do. Shall we profit by the experience or go on piling up expense, to say nothing of the trouble and annoyance.—Sacramento Sunday News.

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR

The way to have a woman believe anything is for it to be unbelievable. What do unmarried women do for somebody to button them up the back? There's nothing can make a woman prouder than having a stylish dress except thinking she has. When a man can afford to smoke as many cigars as he does he wouldn't know the truth if he swore to it. One of the agonies of life is that the Christmas season leaves in sight just when the coal bills begin to get big.

SKIDOO MINER THROWS MONEY OUT OF AIRSHIP

Bombarded a Cheering Crowd With Gold and Silver—Rode About in Auto Doing the Same Foolish Trick.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 14. — Ascending in an airship in order to be able to scatter money among the people more lavishly and with more equality, is an experience seldom sought or enjoyed by any one, but that was the experience yesterday of E. Oscar Hart, mining man of Skidoo, California. Hart has a penchant for filling his pockets with miscellaneous silver and gold and distributing it with both hands. Several times in Los Angeles he has driven through the streets in an automobile throwing money to the crowd that was following him, and having a huge time witnessing the scramble for his money.

Yesterday at Chutes Park, Hart ascended for twenty minutes in Roy Knudsen's airship, while he threw handfuls of money to the crowd of 2000 below. Hart said afterward that this was more sport and much better than bombarding the people with money from the tower of an automobile. He said to have disposed of a considerable sum.

BEGIN CAMPAIGN FOR "CLEANER" NEWSPAPERS

NEW YORK, Dec. 14. — A campaign for a "cleaner press" has been inaugurated in New York with the hope of inducing newspapers to eliminate from their columns anything that might be suggestive or offensive. The move has been started by an open letter of three prominent men who declare they have the support of Archbishop Farley, Bishop Green, Joseph H. Schiff, the banker and financier, Robert W. F. Forest and others. The cooperation of the public is invited and while there is no desire, it is said, to "censor" the news, it is believed that a campaign along proper lines will be effective. The letter is signed by Morley Williams, a lawyer identified with church and charitable work and manager of the Evangelical Alliance of the United States; Edward H. Planch, a writer, lecturer and clubman, and Charles B. McKenna.

She said, "One day she saw a piece of driftwood floating along and jumped on to it for a ride. Later she took to catching fish, bringing in those weighing three quarters of a pound and feeding them to her kittens."

Pointed Paragraphs

A period of time is a connotation mark in history. If some men were to lose their self-correct here wouldn't be a good better. Other people may have a good taste, but of course yours is a still better. To waste a lot of time in trying to obtain things they have no earthly use for. The old blue laws were enough to make our ancestors feel the same color. Mainly dating a snow shoe detracts from the picturesqueness of the winter landscape. And the way of the modern is to say "I told you so" after the event has occurred. A man is entitled to his share, but he has no right to try to share another man from him. And a woman's idea of a party that costs a lot of money, regardless of what it looks like. Somehow it is mostly a matter of mother to persuade her to marry the kind of man who will make her happy.

MOTHER OF TWO MOTHERS ONLY WOMAN RUN INSURANCE COMPANY

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—Among the accredited representatives at the annual meeting of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents which closed its business after being in session two days, was a woman—the only woman in the world who is an officer of a life insurance company. She is Mrs. L. C. Rawson of Des Moines, Ia., and she is vice president of the Des Moines Life Insurance Company, a corporation which carries $27,000,000 in policies on its books. Her husband is president of the company.

Mrs. Rawson is everything that is womanly and if she herself would not let her pride lead her to the ready confession that she is the mother of two mothers and of a seventeen-year-old six-foot boy preparing to enter Princeton, nobody would ever suspect that she is "no longer thirty."

"I have been in the insurance business twenty years," said Mrs. Rawson to a reporter. "You wouldn't think it. Well, it's true, and please save your compliments. I'm the mother of two married daughters and both of them are the mothers of two of the sweetest families in the world."

Why She Went Into Business.

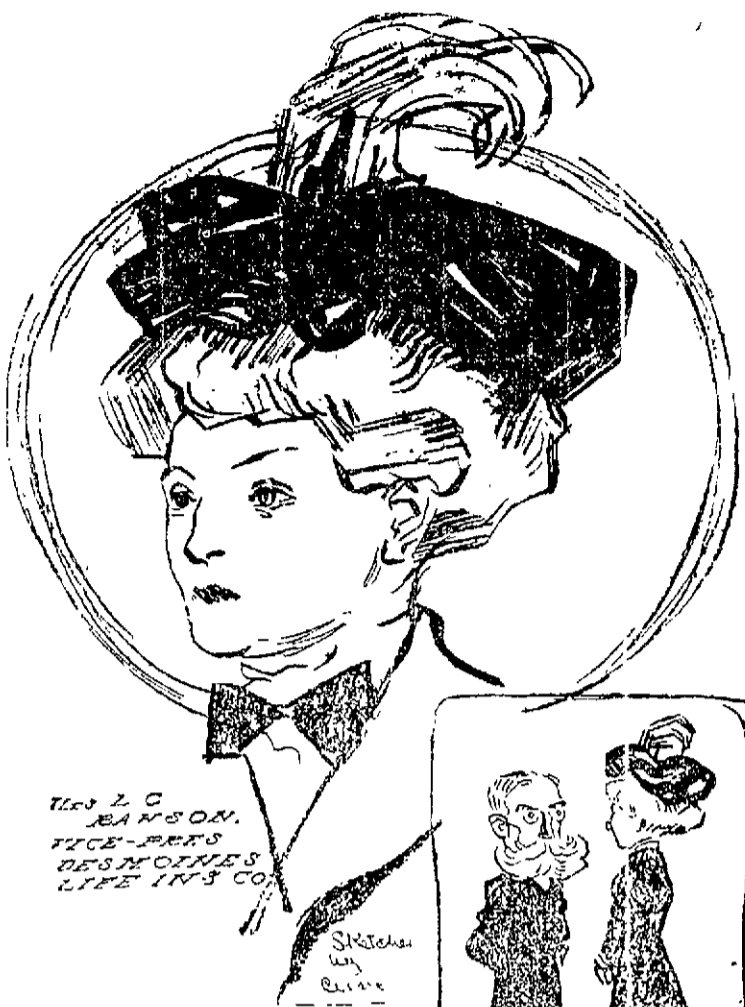

"Yes; I don't mind telling you how I came to go into the insurance business. I had a little boy and he died and"—Mrs. Rawson's lips quivered for a moment. "My baby's death was a cruel blow. I thought I would go crazy. I brooded and finally I realized that I must do something to occupy my mind or I would surely go mad. The doctors told my husband that I must occupy my mind in some way, but they made no suggestion that helped. Finally the idea came to me that I should like to be with Mr. Rawson more and I asked him to let me into his office. I started out as secretary of the company and gradually assumed control of the entire office force."

"That's right," said a Western friend who was passing and who happened to overhear the statement. "Tell the truth, Mrs. Rawson. You ran the whole office. You kept that company of yours going."

"Well, I didn't run the whole company," continued Mrs. Rawson in embarrassment. "It just helped. In those days Mr. Rawson had to lead the field because Mr. Rawson hadn't sent the business into it. During the past year though I have been alone a good deal

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—If anybody knows the present whereabouts of May Irene Walter, or Marsh, or Hoyt by profession, or her girl, and within the last year a member of one of the companies that played a Wallace's Theater then that somebody will be doing May Irene a service by sending her address to J. Newton Williams, attorney, 25 Liberty street.

Williams represents the creditors of John P. Anson, a shareholder of South Brooklyn, who died six months ago leaving an estate worth $50,000. Anson's estate is all personal property and since he died without leaving a will must be divided by law between his widow and his next of kin. He left no direct heirs.

Miss May Irene is all the next of kin there is. She is a niece of Anson, being the only daughter of a sister of his who is now dead, and there is $25,000 coming to her as soon as she can be found.

Williams says that the principal stumbling block in the way of finding May Irene lies in the fact that he doesn't know her stage name. Her real name was originally May Irene Walter, but he understands that she has been twice married; once to a man named Marsh, and again to a man named Hoyt. In addition, she may have a stage name or two, and Williams doesn't know them. Williams wishes it made plain that Mrs. Walter-Marsh Hoyt will save herself money by appearing at once and claiming what is hers. Already a pretty penny of her inheritance has been spent in an effort to find her, and more will have to go into the hole after it if she doesn't materialize soon.

The final accounting in the Anson estate will be filed in Brooklyn soon. If May Irene Walter-Marsh-Hoyt hasn't come to the front by then and claimed her good fortune, her money will be deposited with the City Chamberlain and all the detectives, trailers and identifiers who are now out hunting her will be called off.

Once her money gets into the Chamberlain's hands it will be up to May Irene herself to find out that it is there.

Husband Shoots Self Beside Sleeping Wife

SALIDA, Co., Dec. 14.—While his bride was fast asleep shortly before midnight and after he had promised her faithfully not to make another attempt at suicide, sealing the pledge with a kiss, Michael Logan stealthily arose from their bed, secured a revolver from where he had secreted it under the dresser, and put a bullet into his left breast. The London missile missed the heart by only an inch, but inflicted a wound which the attending physicians say will prove fatal in a few hours. Logan's inability to overcome the whisky habit is given as the reason for his act.

Early last July, Logan became despondent because he could not leave the "quor alone" and shot himself through the abdomen. While still weak from the effects of this attempt at suicide, he was married to Miss Annie Henson, to whom he had been engaged for a long time.

Yesterday afternoon, Logan told his wife he could not overcome the whisky habit and that he believed it would be best for them both if he ended his life. He drew a revolver from his pocket and was in the act of placing the muzzle to his right temple when Mrs. Logan arrested him and made another attempt at self-destruction and renewed the pledge with a kiss just before his bride went to sleep.

Logan secured a second revolver yesterday afternoon and secreted it under the dresser. The tragedy took place at the home of the bride's mother on the lower west. Logan was formerly a bartender.

the woman by a ceremonial marriage was supposed to be dealt, has been settled by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. The case is that of Katie Dietrich against Michael Dietrich, in which a separation was sought.

Upon the decision rests the fate of many couples who have married in the belief that their former spouse was dead, should it be sustained by the higher courts.

The facts in the case show that in 1892 Katie Dietrichmann, twenty years old, came to this country from Germany and was married to Otto Krabel. Ten years after the wedding in December, 1892, they parted and never met again. In 1893 Mrs. Krabel formed the acquaintance of Michael Dietrich, a prosperous business man of this city. With him she set up housekeeping. She became known to Dietrich's friends and relatives as his wife. A child was born to them.

GOT HER DECREE.

In 1905 Mrs. Dietrich left Dietrich and began suit for a separation, alleging ill-treatment. Dietrich retained Lawyer August P. Wugener, of 49 Chambers street, who made the defense that at the time of the common-law law marriage the plaintiff was married and that it had not been shown her husband was dead or that she was divorced. On the trial before Justice Dayton the plaintiff testified that at the time of the common-law marriage she was not familiar with the English language and did not understand the legal significance of a common-law marital agreement. She testified that as an inducement to marry her Dietrich promised her a $1,000 insurance policy on his life and said that he did not believe in a ceremonial marriage. The life insurance policy made out in favor of Katie Dietrich was put in evidence. Justice Dayton granted her a separation, the custody of the child and alimony. The judgment has been set aside and a new trial ordered by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Justice John Proctor Clarke writing the opinion, in which all his colleagues concur.

Takes Wife and Cash Of Boss; Says 'Go To'

LANSDOWN, Pa., Dec. 14.—Mr. Boarding Boss: Me got your money. Me got your wife. We go have good time. You go to—

MIKE MAVOLITZ. This was the note which confronted Gustav Remmer, a Pole, who conducts a boarding house here, when he awoke yesterday morning.

Remmer immediately notified the State constabulary, with the result that the boarder was caught by the State police at Reading and brought back to town for a hearing, after which he was taken to Mauch Chunk jail to await trial.

It is charged that Mavolitz not only took $400 belonging to the boarding boss, but that he also forged a check on the Lansford bank, and that he will have to answer two serious charges.

A COSTLY PARISIAN NOVELTY. This jeweled lady's watch, to be worn as a ring, is the latest thing in Parisian bling-bling. It costs anything from $100 upwards.

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 14.—From saleswoman behind a department store counter to the wife of the head of the firm, and to be left a widow three weeks after her marriage, while a fortune estimated at probably a quarter million dollars, is the romance in which Mrs. Joseph Hill, of this city, is the central figure.

To add a still further romance to the strange series of events, it is said by intimate friends of the dead merchant, that the marriage was performed with the hope of precluding any contest of his will, Hill always having desired to leave his estate to the saleswoman, Miss Clara Elizabeth Wells. She was head of the glove and underwear departments for about twenty-seven years.

YIELDED HIS HEART.

For more than fifteen years Joseph Hill, the head of Crosby & Hill, one of the largest department stores in Delaware, paid court to the woman in his employ, but never a word or action did he betray to the forty other employees in the store that he had yielded his heart to the woman at the head of the departments.

DIED IN THREE WEEKS.

To most of the employees the announcement of the marriage was a great surprise, though some guessed the truth when Mrs. Hill remained away from the store before Nov. 12, when the marriage ceremony took place.

Not for a long time has this such a surprise as when a saleswoman, a brunette of pleasant manner, gave up her job behind the counter to marry the head of the store, who was seventy years old, and for his newly appointed home, at West Street, Goshop had hardly been in the city when Mrs. Hill, widow's words of the funeral husband of just three weeks

TILT BECAUSE HE WAS 'BOSSY'

DENVER, Dec. 14.—Just because he got too "bossy" with his fiancée before the arrival of their wedding day, James Neville, a Longmont farmer, lost a bride and the fortune she would have brought him.

Mrs. Stella Headley, a widow who has a rooming house at Fifteenth and Lawrence street, was the bride-elect and she told Justice C. J. Gavin, why she threw down Neville and why she thinks he has no right to the $200 he is suing her for.

Because Neville, not being able to get his presents back, wants Mrs. Headley to reimburse him for the silk skirts, fancy waists, jewelry and other trinkets he gave her when no cloud disturbed love's young dream in their courting days.

Several years ago James Neville came into Stella Headley's life in Denver. She was in trouble and, as he says, he proved a gallant knight-errant. He didn't ride into the lists armed cap-a-pie and do physical battle for her, but he did lend her money to go into court and recover a homestead claim in Grand county which she had signed away.

From the homestead thus recovered Mrs. Headley realized several thousand dollars, but Neville claims she never paid him back the money advanced or presents he gave her during days when they were engaged.

"She won't marry me and she won't give me my money back."

"Well, he was too bossy, judge," said Mrs. Headley. "He insisted on ordering me and my children about before I married him."

"But I did pay him back the $125 he first advanced me and later I loaned him $500. Of this he paid $120 on account, but as he owes the balance I don't think I owe him anything on his presents."

However, Mrs. Headley said she was not in earnest when she told Neville she would marry him, after their engagement had once been broken off. "I was only jollying him so he would pay me what he owed," she told the court. As all the evidence has not been submitted Justice Gavin will continue the hearing this afternoon.

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch of Evanston, the only woman Justice of the Peace in the United States, in a woman's suffrage address yesterday, denounced Adam as a loafer, painted Eve as the mother of all the arts and sciences and declared that the history of the human race showed that woman was the originator of most of the good things of the world for which man now takes the credit.

Mother of Twelve Children Declares Her Twenty-Four Years of Married Life Have Been a Long Honeymoon

ELEVEN OF OFFSPRING ARE NOW HEALTHY AND HAPPY

Patrick Cavanaugh and Wife Are Not Guilty of Race Suicide.

"As long as a man is willing to provide for a big family, why not have it," said Mrs. Cavanaugh, who is the mother of eleven children, with whom she resides at 2012 Clement avenue, Alameda.

MARRIED 24 YEARS.

During the twenty-four years of her married life, which she declares has been one long courtship, twelve children were born in this State. Eleven of them are living. They are Arthur, fourteen months old; Mildred, three years old; Leo, ten years old; Edwin, twelve years old; Beatrice, thirteen years old; Richard, sixteen years old; Frank, seventeen years old; Lillian, nineteen years old; Walter, twenty-one years old.

ONE OF FIFTEEN.

Mrs. Cavanaugh is descended from a family where there were fifteen children, who grew to strong manhood and womanhood. The example was set before her by past generations who believed as she does in large families.

A STRONG WOMAN.

"God has made me a strong woman," declared Mrs. Cavanaugh this morning in explaining the manner in which she successfully raised her family, which she is very proud of. The little ones are the joy of her life, which she devotes entirely to them. Morning, noon and night she watches over them and they are seldom allowed to go out of her sight.

$15 A WEEK FOR FOOD.

Without any deprivation of the good things of life, Mrs. Cavanaugh states that she spends $15 a week on the food, which she buys by the wholesale and the remainder of the money is expended on clothing for the children. She makes all the dresses the little ones wear and uses entirely "Galatea," a cheap fabric. All the washing and ironing is done by Mrs. Cavanaugh.

Through the careful management of Mrs. Cavanaugh, nothing is wanted in the household.

"The plainest kind of food is given the children," said Mrs. Cavanaugh. "They never have eggs except in puddings, nor do they use butter, as that would be too expensive."

About fifty cents worth of meat is bought a day for the older children. That is considered ample. There is never picking between meals. We frequently have stuffed meat. Every day we use not less than four loaves of bread, beans, macaroni, sauces, cake and milk. Two gallons of milk is consumed during the day. That is the chief form of their diet. Not a crumb of bread or a drop of milk goes to waste. Everything is used. We have a cow and a well, where the water is pumped.

PLENTY FRESH AIR.

"I believe in plenty of fresh air for children and allowing nature to take her course. I do not believe in medicine. I have never had any occasion to administer drugs to any of my children, who have never been ill a day in their lives. I have never so far had to call for the services of a physician. All that is required when the children have a cold is a cup of hot chocolate instead of hot lemonade before they retire."

NEVER LOST SLEEP.

"I have never lost an hour's sleep with any of my children. They have never given me trouble of any kind that I can remember."

Patrick Cavanaugh, the head of the household, does his share toward supporting the family.

ISLANDS NOT FOR SALE.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—The Irish correspondent of the Cologne Gazette says in a dispatch that he is authorized to deny the story from Paris that Germany is able to acquire the Bergelen islands.

TESTIFIES HE LIED IN THE INTERESTS OF EMPLOYER

Deceit was employed by F. C. Leavitt while acting as special agent for Andrew Hunter, Klondike pioneer, according to testimony which Leavitt gave on cross-examination in Judge Wast's court today.

Leavitt said that he had often lied to people in the interest of his employer, Attorney M. C. Chapman, defending Hunter, then showed Leavitt's apparently contradictory statements made by him while giving his deposition when the case first was held. Leavitt sued Hunter for $40,000 for alleged services as agent and mining expert.

The trial will probably be continued, as Judge Wast will be called upon to decide over the trial of Peter Claudine, indicted on a charge of dynamiting the Schneck house in East Oakland.

WILL LOCK UP HATCHETMEN AND PREVENT TONG WAR

Police Already Have Many of Them in Jail

Twenty-one suspicious characters, including six alleged Chinese hatchetmen, are under arrest at the city prison with their names on the secret files, they having been rounded up during the past two days in the drag-net thrown out by the police. They were taken into custody for the purpose of investigating their past records and with the object in view of putting a stop to crime and nipping in the bud a threatened outbreak in the Chinese section.

WILL PREVENT WAR.

At a recent conference of the heads of the police department, Chief of Police Wilson issued orders to arrest all suspicious characters and vagrant throughout the city and also to round up and hold for investigation all Chinese who act suspiciously or who are found to have concealed weapons in their possession. The police also determined that if the release of the suspects is effected by habeas corpus proceedings they would be immediately re-arrested. It is the intention of the police to arrest Chinese and keep them in custody until the leaders of the On Yick and Sun Dong tong, now at war, decide to come to a peaceful settlement of their differences.

HAS PRICE ON HEAD.

It was reported at police headquarters this morning that Lim Ben, one of the most widely known and most prominent of the local Chinese, was in hiding owing to the threatened outbreak of the highlanders. A price is now on his head and he has determined to keep off the streets until the warring tong conclude to bury the hatchet. Gee On, the leader of the On Yick, is also in seclusion. When it is necessary for him to leave his home on business affairs, he is accompanied by a bodyguard. The police patrol in the Chinese section has been strengthened in anticipation of shooting.

The white men under arrest are for the most part without visible means of livelihood. They will be obliged to either show a clear record, go to work or take the chances of becoming additions to the chain gang.

Baird Will Contest Delayed Two Weeks

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 14.—The hearing in the will contest which is being instituted on behalf of the heirs of the late David Jennings Baird, has been continued for two weeks. When the matter was called in court it developed that an error had been made in connection with the status of Mrs. Veronica Baird, the mother of the deceased, and for that reason a continuance was asked.

STRUCK BY CAR.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 14.—While driving across the tracks at Eighteenth and Castro streets shortly before noon today, James Connolly, a driver for the Emporium, was thrown from his wagon in a collision with a street car and seriously injured. He was pitched head-on to the pavement and sustained several lacerations of the scalp and numerous bruises.

SHOOTS HUSBAND TO SAVE HERSELF AND CHILDREN

Mrs. A. W. Jones Fires in Self Defense

Mrs. A. W. Jones of 431 Twenty-fourth street, in protecting herself from her husband last night, fired a shot at him, which had broken in the door and inflicted a flesh wound in the arm. She maintained that she shot in self-defense, and has not been arrested. The wounded man was taken to the Receiving Hospital.

Mrs. Jones, who is a pretty little woman with four small children, said this morning:

"My husband's mind has been affected for years. He is a much better man when he is sober, but when he is drunk he works on some inventions of his own and the extra work and disappointment when they were destroyed by fire have been too much for his nerves."

"My husband always took good care of his family and was proud of his children. When he was himself he was a loving and

INSANITY COMMISSIONERS AT TRIAL OF KORERN

(Special to The Tribune.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 14.—A large crowd, among whom were many Koreans of the city, assembled this morning to listen to the proceedings in the trial of I. W. Chang, accused of the murder of D. W. Stevens, the Japanese diplomat, which occurred last March at the ferry building.

The hearing began at 10:30 a. m., and Special Prosecutor Samuel Knight made the opening argument, setting forth what he expected to prove and connecting Chang definitely with the assassination. The defense, which included Attorney Nat. Cogan, Frank Barrett, and Judge Robert Fernal, announced that they would object to any testimony being offered regarding Chang, the companion of Stevens, who has disappeared from the city.

On cross examination Attorney Cogan endeavored to tangle up the witness, and succeeded in showing that he did not know Stevens at all, and other than by report, was unable to say that it was indeed he who had stepped from the hotel automobile. The members of the board of insanity commissioners were present in the courtroom, having been subpoenaed as witnesses in the case.

RICHES AND POVERTY GREAT BARS TO INTELLECTUAL LIFE, SAYS DIVINE

CHICAGO, Dec. 14.—Rev. Dr. J. S. Stone, whose church, St. James, is largely a starting point for the rich, delivered a sermon on the extravagance and luxury of the rich, and the poverty and luxury of the poor.

"Extravagance and indulgence," declared Dr. Stone, "are barriers as might as those of poverty and the nobler qualities of life."

It is for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of God, or into the kingdom of the intellectual life.

"Ignorance is not confined to the haunts of the poor; oftentimes it is even more dense in the home of the rich; eyes, in spite of the luxury; nay, because of the luxury. Give me neither poverty nor riches, said the wise man some thousands of years ago. They who have either have a desperate battle to fight if they are going to be anything either in this world or in the world to come."

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 14.—Judge Lawlor this morning continued the indictments against F. C. Drum, Eugene De Sabla, and John Martin for four weeks on motion of Attorney Frank Barrett.
